Pasific Railroad as a government work and by government resource. We do not believe that any intelligence can can be or can have been honest in saying such a thing. On the contrary, we are core that no man of even the most ordinary intelligence can honestly assert, that, in his view, the constitutionality and expediency of the Pacific Railroad as a government enterprise are either amounced or assum do or implied in the Cincinnati platform.

We carnestly wish for the country's sake, since Mr B an is to be President for the next four years, that he were an honest man. But, in view of the fact, that in a neaking let er to t'alifornia, he expered a large possession as a prosenting of honesty that even the spoils-enjoying, spoils-seeking, and epoils-expecting editors of his party cannot be trought to say that they can regard it as honest, the problem of the country is such as the problem of the past, we cannot perfect out as certainly miserable.
